Among the passengers by the City of Hel-ena yesterday were Mra. E. Whitmore and her niece, Miss Arnett Brown, who have been on a couple of months visit to Topeka, Ka. A St. Louis special to the Cincinnati Com-mercial, of date August 12th, says: "The latest report from Hickman says John Lang-lois, second clerk of the Gold Dust, is dying." Captain James Surfees, the obliging purser of the James W. Gaff, advises us by mail that this popular steamer will arrive from Cincinnati Thursday morning, and re-turns on Friday evening as usual. A Louisville dispatch of Sunday says: "Fred Manfield, second clerk of the steamer Paris C. Brown, died on that boat below this city this afternoon. The remains were to Cincinnati, the home of his parents."

Cincinnati Commercial, Sunday: "Among the Gaff's passengers from Memphis are Colonel Lewis Hanauer and family. The colonel is one of the greatest cotton kings of the Mississippi valley. Major H. P. Hampson and his young and beautiful wife; Major Hampson is a planter of the bends, and came with his family for a little recreation to the Queen City. R. H. Henry and family, of the Brookhaven (Miss.) Ledger. The Gaff had quite a party from the lower country. All well pleased—from a vote of thanks to the crew for kind attentions on the trip." Vicksburg Herald, Sunday: "Young John O'Neil, whose death is reported from St. Louis, was deckhand on the Gold Dust. His father was an old steamboalman, and John was a schoolmate of most of the young men of this city during the years of 1866, 1867 and 1868. He was a fine-looking fellow, intelligent far beyond his sistion, unobtrusive in his wasse and his wasners and addressed and addressed the state of th

The New Oriestos Times-Democral takes the following for a text, and editorializes at some length: "Insurance, more than anything else, is a hindrance to the competition between the river and the railroads. Freight by the former route has no insurance to pay, or at least, a merely nominal one, while the river rates are very high. A merchant shipriver rates are very high. A merchant shipping by river has to pay two charges, by railroad only one. The railroad company, therefore, can actually charge a higher freight to a given point and yet carry the goods there cheaper than a sieamboat can. Our merchants, consequently, find this insurance opposing, fighting and injuring river trade at every point on the Mississippi reacked by a railroad."

The Color correspondent of the Conjunctive

The Cairo correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, writing on the 11th, says: "Al-most a serious : ocident occurred in the harbor resterday. Messrs. Ralston and Brazee had inspected one battery of boilers on the trans-er steamer Junius S. Morgan, and the enfer steamer Junius S. Morgan, and the engineer, after heating the water, as he thought, sufficiently, turned on steam from the other battery to facilitate the heating process. Either the water was not hot enough, or he turned on too much steam, and the result was that the boiler heaved and surged like a man in convulsions. The engineer saw how the thing was acting in time to save a catastrophe by turning off the steam. The boiler had surged one inch forward out of place, and but little more would have broken the steam-pipe connection with 1,000 have broken the steam-pipe connection with 6,750 the other boiler, and the result would have been the same as a blow-up. Everybody on as a warning to engineers not to let a jet of hot steam into a boiler full of cold water."

MONDAY, WEDN Omes, No. 2 Man "Walt," of Cairo, presents some sensible suggestions: "One of the evils of the pres ent day in engineering on steamboats is the habit of letting the striker have charge of once. Strikers should be licensed men, or some other plan should be devised to have the process of boiling water in the hands of experienced men. Another evil that the late disaster brings to light afresh is the manner of feeding water into boilers. The plan is the same as that used in the dark ages. One pipe does all the feeding. It leads into one boiler, and that connects with the others. Now, by this process one boiler may, under certain circumstances, be pumped full of water, and the pipe leading to the others be so stopped up that no water can get be so stopped up that no water can get through, and they are consequently, nearly empty. Presently the force of the increasing steam, or the water, drives the plug out and there is an explosion." WEATHER AND RIVERS.
